

Eden Outreach Consultative Services

Picture a child who shrinks from touch or who spends hours playing with a candy wrapper, ignoring the latest toys around him. Picture an adult who before leaving a room retraces every step he took. Picture a person who, because of an inability to let you know what he's thinking hits his head to get your attention. Picture a person with autism.

Now, Picture a child who is playing with his toys and pulling his mother to play with him. Picture a child in a general education class raising his hand to answer a question. Picture an adult working in a mall, living and enjoying his community. Picture again a person with autism.

With appropriate support such as specialized educational programs, ancillary services, community-based residential and employment programs, individuals with autism can be successful. However, for many parents and professionals, securing supports can be a challenge. In 1986, the Eden Autism Services established its Outreach Division to make these critical supports and services available to all individuals with autism. Since that time, the division has grown to provide an array of highly individualized services ground in applied behavior analysis (ABA) to assist with best practices for the treatment of autism spectrum disorders. Eden's consultative services are available to parents, professionals and public/private agencies dedicated to providing effective services for individuals with autism.

To date, Eden has assisted over 100 school districts and agencies in developing unique and successful programs for students and adults with autism. References are available upon request.
